

MARKETING

101

Marketing 101

- What we are going to do in this module is build the offer for your business
- By the time you are finished with this module you will have your business ready to launch with a clear picture of how to market it online

Marketing 101

- Before we start building your offer, there are a few important pieces to understand about marketing which we are going to cover in this lesson
- As you go through this module, take notes and focus on learning/absorbing the information...

Marketing 101

- Do not try to build your offer as I present the information; instead focus on understanding the material
- At the end of this module there will be a worksheet to help you craft your offer (we've pre-built most of it for you)

Marketing 101

- This worksheet will tie together all the information you learn from this module into a tangible offer that will be ready to launch
- But until then listen, absorb, ask questions, and understand

Marketing 101

- In this lesson specifically, we are going to cover the different components of what builds an offer and why they're important
- The first thing we are going to cover is what an offer is

THE OFFER

Marketing 101

- An offer is what service you provide to the marketplace, the conditions those services are provided, and your positioning in the marketplace
- Your offer is what separates you from other coaches
- A strong offer = a strong business; A weak offer = a weak business

Marketing 101

- When a client comes to you and wants to work with you; your offer is going to be what you provide for them as the solution
- The conditions of an offer make it unique as well
- Variables of conditions include: price, time, delivery, guarantees
- These conditions will influence your customers buying decision

Marketing 101

- What I see happening online with coaches is that their offer is commoditized. Meaning that the market has no regard who produced the service
- This is where you run into trouble with clients “price shopping”

Marketing 101

- Marketing yourself as another Online Coach or Personal Trainer is a surefire way to blending in as you are no different than the other guy who can do it for cheaper
- A good way to tell if your offer is commoditized is if you are taking any generic client you can and doing what we call “order taking”

Marketing 101

- Order taking is when you cater your offer to meet someone's specific needs, like taking someone's order at a restaurant.
- And though you are providing a valuable service, there's little to no value in the offer because your customers can get the same thing anywhere else

Marketing 101

- So how do you prevent this as a coach, beat the competition, and charge premium prices for your services?
- By having an offer that's unique to you that can't be bought anywhere else
- It's done by owning a process of transformation that people can only get by coming to you

Marketing 101

- Instead of taking someone's order, you are selling a repeatable process that people are coming to you for
- Instead of being another Online Coach you want to be the Founder of “specific transformation program”

Marketing 101

- The psychology of someone joining a transformation program vs hiring a trainer is not the same; by the end of this, people will be paying you to join YOUR program
- In order to do this we are going to build your offer that's unique to you to stand out in the market place starting with your niche

THE NICHE

Marketing 101

- Your niche is broken down into 4 building blocks with the first being your ideal client
- Your ideal client is the specific person you want to target with your offer
- Having an ideal client allows you to hone in on a subgroup of people and speak directly to them

Marketing 101

- Having an ideal client is the difference between working with the people you love to work with (i.e females looking to reverse diet, or men who want to build muscle) and working with people you dont enjoy (your mom's friend who hired you but doesnt want to put in the work)

Marketing 101

- Like I mentioned before, your ideal client is important because it allows you to target this group of people with your content
- When your content is targetted your offer will stick out to them because its relevant

Marketing 101

- We have a tool in our brains called the reticular activation system which allows us to sift through relevant, and irrelevant information quickly
- Without it we would be overstimulated with information all the time. Our brains actually don't pay attention to most of the things in our day to day

Marketing 101

- But have you ever had an instance where youre in a crowded place, but you somehow hear your name called far away
- Or when youre thinking about a car and all of a sudden you start seeing that car more often than before
- This is your reticular activation system

Marketing 101

- When you tailor your content towards your ideal client, your offer is going to be more relevant to them and stand out
- Another benefit is that having a clear picture of who your ideal client is will help you create content

Marketing 101

- You will be able to get into the minds and painpoints of these people
- If you ever get stuck creating content, you can use them as a tool to help you
- Overall, your ideal client is there to help you target your offer so it stands out

Marketing 101

- One mistake I see often is people choose too wide of an age range with their ideal client
- They'll say "my ideal client is 20-30"
- 20-30 is a huge age range
- I know that I am a very different person at 25 than I was at even just 23, let alone 20. And I will be a different person at 30 than I am at 25

Marketing 101

- So appealing to both 20 and 30 year olds at the same time wont be productive
- You have to think of your ideal client not in terms of age or demographic, but in the types of people or terms of the stage of life theyre in
- Are they in college, do they have 9-5s, are they business owners, are they athletes, or even moms

Marketing 101

- Stage of life would be if they're post college, starting a family, mid-life crisis, etc.
- Understanding the stage of life, or type of person will help you target a deep group of people and stand out to them with your offer

Marketing 101

- For example think of someone who works a 9-5: “hire a personal trainer and get results” VS “If youre someone whos limited on time and needs a quick fitness routine join Hustler’s Fitness
Transformation”
- Which is going to stand out to someone who’s busy?

Marketing 101

- Using the same example of someone with a 9-5 when creating content: “Here’s how you track your macros vs Here’s how you can see quick results in your diet without having to waste a ton of time meal prepping”
- Same information, same offer, but your ideal client makes it pop

Marketing 101

- Concerns I hear about narrowing down ideal client is that trainers feel they are leaving out a large number of clients they could help
- While this may be true, not every client will be worth your time
- Building a strong offer is about helping who you know you could help best

Marketing 101

- There was a time in my coaching business where I was asked to build a keto meal plan
- I spent 4 weeks researching the keto diet as it was not my expertise
- By the end of the 4 weeks I built the plan and my client told me it was the worst meal plan theyve had

Marketing 101

- I realized then that I could've spent those 4 weeks gaining new clients I knew how to serve than doing myself and my client a disservice by taking on something that wasn't aligned with my business

Marketing 101

- You also do not need that many clients to have a thriving business. You only need enough to fill your plate
- It's not about helping everyone, its about helping people you know you can help 100% and creating a repeatable process for success and being really good at it

Marketing 101

- Another important note is that your ideal client doesn't mean your service is exclusive
- It's simply to help you target your marketing online
- If you have someone come to you that you can help, help them even if they're not your ideal client

Marketing 101

- Your client roster will look different than your ideal client
- Your ideal client is to help you gain clarity on who youre speaking to through your content
- Work with anyone you can help even if they dont look like your ideal client

Marketing 101

- Example: if your ideal client is a male 9-5er in his 20s looking to build muscle, but a female in her 30s approaches you looking to lose weight; if you can help her help her. Dont exclude people you can help

Marketing 101

- The next component of your offer is the challenges/problems your offer solves
- You need to understand that people don't start working out because they love to workout
- It's always because they are looking to solve a problem and happen to fall in love with the process

Marketing 101

- If you are working with people who need help in the gym, I'll tell you right now they're not looking to start for the sake of working out
- No one wakes up and thinks, "I really want to learn how to workout"
- They think, "I don't like the way I feel, I should look for a solution"

Marketing 101

- Your offer is the solution and fitness is part of that solution
- When your marketing your offer as the solution, you need to understand what specific challenges you are marketing towards
- Examples: unhealthy food relationship, lack of confidence, unhappy with the way they feel, no energy

Marketing 101

- Remember the challenges here are deeper than weight loss, or weight gain
- Its a challenge thats effecting their life on a deep level
- Because theyre overweight they cant enjoy outdoors activities
- Or because they have a poor relationship with food they cant eat out with their family

Marketing 101

- Think about how their life is being effected in a negative way
- Understanding your ideal clients challenges will activate their reticular activation system, capture their attention, and help you tailor your content as well

Marketing 101

- If you know that your ideal client is an ex athlete that got out of shape after their sport you can say:
“If you’re struggling to keep a routine after your career in sports, join The All-Star Transformation Program”
- Knowing your ideal clients challenge helps you tailor your offer to solve their problems

Marketing 101

- Next is the transformation
- The transformation is simply the result after the program.
- A big mistake I see trainers make online is that they market the process (working out and eating good) more than they market the result

Marketing 101

- Most people do not hire fitness coaches for the process
- They hire them for the result
- Most people dont see a plate of broccoli and think “Wow that looks awesome, I should hire a trainer”
- They look at someone who’s confident and think, “I’m willing to do what it takes to achieve that”.

Marketing 101

- When you are marketing your offer, know what the end goal is and show that to your ideal client through your content
- What do they want to achieve on the other side?
This is what's going to attract them most
- The transformation is why your clients are joining your program. Make that the focal point

Marketing 101

- Examples: building a bikini body, winning a competition, getting their dream girl, enjoying a vacation off track, going out wearing their favorite clothes
- Think of the difference: “Hire a personal trainer to eat and workout VS Build your dream body by this summer”

Marketing 101

- Lastly, your method is simply your process for helping your ideal client overcome their challenges and achieve their transformation
- It's HOW you get your clients results
- Most trainers never market their method and they're missing huge opportunity because your method is what makes you different

Marketing 101

- Your method is why people will invest in you over the competition because they believe in your method
- Anyone can lose weight with any coach, but if your ideal client believes that YOUR method is what they need they'll pay you a premium

Marketing 101

- In order for this to be effective, you need to have a clear cut process for getting results
- Examples: HIIT, Intermittent Fasting, Fasted Cardio, Progressive Overload, Endurance Training, Tracking Macros, Intuitive Eating

Marketing 101

- Think of Weight Watchers and P90X
- Both have the same ideal client, challenge, and transformation: middle-age adults looking to lose weight but hate the gym
- The difference between these two offers is the process in which they deliver results

Marketing 101

- Weight watchers is a point system where clients track
- P90X is home workouts that focus on “muscle confusion”
- Same ideal client, challenge, transformation, different process

Marketing 101

- Your process is what makes you different and stand out and it is why people will invest in YOU vs the competition
- Market your method as the reason why people haven't been seeing results before and why they'll see results now

Marketing 101

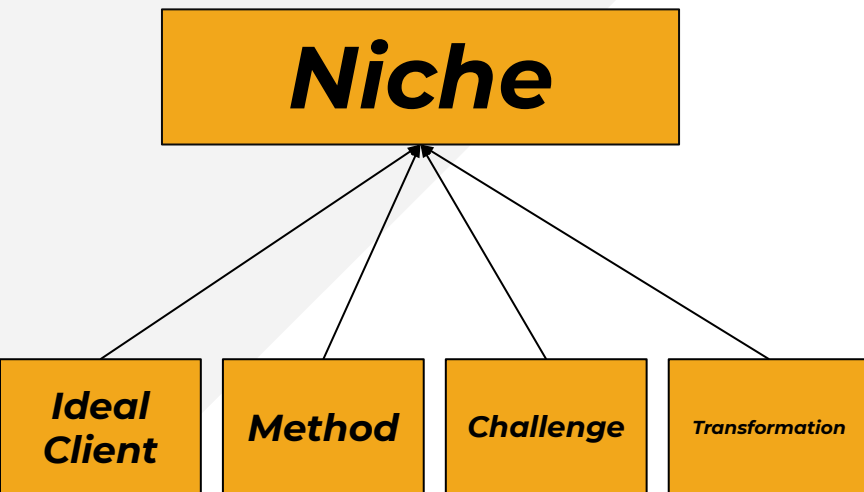

- All of these components together (ideal client, challenge, transformation, and method) is your niche
- A niche is a segment is a marketplace, the more specific in the marketplace you go the more niche you are

Marketing 101

- As a fitness coach you are in the fitness niche
- Even further you can say you are in the weight loss niche
- Even further you can say you are in the weight loss for 9-5ers who want to build confidence
- Even further you can say you are in the weight loss for 9-5ers who want to build confidence by teaching them strength training

Marketing 101

- The more specific you get with your offer, the more niche you are
- Understanding your niche and all the components will help you cater your offer to the right people and stand out against the competition

Marketing 101

- Niche
- Ideal Client
- Challenge
- Transformation
- Method

THE CONDITIONS

Marketing 101

- Your niche is ½ of your offer
- The other ½ is the condition of your offer
- People will make buying decision based on the condition of your offer
- The conditions of your offer broken down are:
Price, Time, Delivery, Guarantee

Marketing 101

- Price is the cost of your program. Your price does need to fit your market
- There would be differences in your price if your ideal client was a college student vs high level executive
- Not all markets are equal

Marketing 101

- If your price is too high for your market you will not make sales no matter how good the service is
- You can figure out the perfect price for you offer by determining your close rate
- If you close 40-50% of your sales calls you are in the sweet spot

Marketing 101

- If you close more than 50% of sales calls you can increase your prices, if you close less than 40% of your sales calls you can lower prices
- Having the perfect price for your offer will be appealing to the correct niche

Marketing 101

- The next aspect to the condition of your offer is time
- Time is how long your program lasts
- Some trainers push for endless month to month, but that's not appealing to the client who has no hard defined goal date

Marketing 101

- Having a program with a timeframe motivates your client knowing that theres an end date
- Its easier to commit to something they know they can see the end of
- The goal by the end is to resign them into longer term plans, but we'll talk about that later

Marketing 101

- The sweet spot for online training is 12 weeks.
- 12 weeks is short enough to commit to and long enough to see real change
- I found that 8 weeks is too short to see results, 16 weeks is too long they get bored before the resign
- By the 12 week mark your client will be ready to sign up for more

Marketing 101

- Marketing time is also important because it allows your client to visualize the end of their transformation
- They can see it in 12 weeks. Its close
- We know that 6-12 months is what people really need, but 12 weeks is enough to get them to take that first step

Marketing 101

- The next part of conditions is your deliverables
- Deliverables are known as what you deliver to your clients. They're what your clients get and receive
- Deliverables can vary in how you deliver

Marketing 101

- For example, are they going to get a workout plan via google pdf or hosted on a CRM, are they going to get a meal plan or macros, are they going to get check ins via text or phone call, will they get a grocery list
- Your deliverables add value to your offer

Marketing 101

- If you don't have a ton of deliverables yet, do not worry you will build them as you progress and we will show you how
- The last component of conditions is a guarantee
- Having a guarantee in your offer will build a strong argument for a close by reducing the risk

Marketing 101

- The strongest guarantee I recommend is a conditional 100% money back guarantee
- This 100% removes the risk of them joining because worst case scenario they can get 100% of their money back
- But there's conditions to this guarantee that must be met in order to qualify

Marketing 101

- The conditions you need to have met for the client to qualify are actions that if taken produce results
- In order for someone to qualify, they must take specific actions, and by having taken these actions they will get results and be satisfied

Marketing 101

- Example: in order to qualify for a 100% money back guarantee they must track every single day, not skip a workout, weigh in every day, and check in every week for 12 weeks.
- If they meet these conditions and do not see results they get 100% money back

Marketing 101

- But the idea here is that if they take these steps they will see results
- And if they take these steps, meet the conditions, do not see results, and they are not satisfied with the service then they should probably get their money back

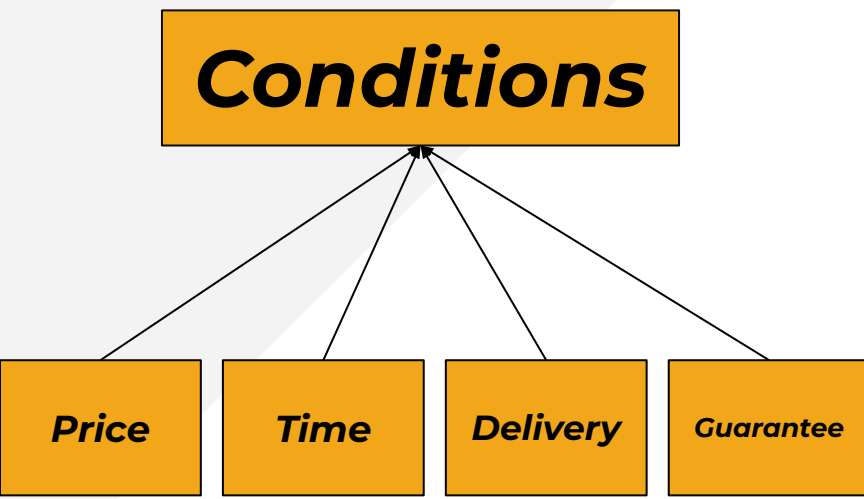

Marketing 101

- What this guarantee does is it removes the downside of risk. There's no reason to say no because there's nothing to lose and more to gain
- A strong guarantee builds a strong offer

Marketing 101

- However I don't recommend offering a guarantee when you are just getting started.
- In the beginning cash is precious and you need to reinvest that back into your business
- Offer a guarantee once you have strong testimonials and more money than you need.

Niche

Marketing 101

- Now we've covered what an offer is and how you can use it to stand out online, we are going to move forward
- Remember we've built most of your offer for you and will have you fill in the blanks later in this module, for now continue to take notes

MARKET POSITIONING

Marketing 101

- The next thing we're going to talk about is market research
- Market research is simply an interview process where you ask your ideal client questions about their goals, challenges, and motivations

Marketing 101

- Market research is important because it helps you hone in your marketing on the key pain points and goals your ideal clients are actively thinking about
- This allows you to stay relevant in your market place and have a clear picture of your positioning

Marketing 101

- We will have you do market research at the end of this module along with building your offer
- Next step is to cover what an “I help” statement is
- An “I help” statement is simply a quick summary of your offer
- A good “I help” statement quickly illustrates what you do, who its for, and how

Marketing 101

- Think of it as an elevator pitch; if you had 60 seconds to tell someone what you do and stand out what would you say?
- To build a strong “I help” statement all you need to do is mention your ideal client and the transformation

Marketing 101

- “I help ____ achieve ____”
- Some of our favorites from past students:
- “Helping women become athletes in the gym”
- “Helping busy individuals build grit and confidence”
- “Helping young professionals win their health back”

Marketing 101

- Your “I help” statement will provide quick clarity and we will use it across your social media platforms, but it will not make or break your business
- Dont stress on getting it down perfect, its important but not that important

Marketing 101

- The final piece to tie in your marketing, is your business name; specifically the name of your transformation program
- Remember you are not just another online coach
- You are the founder of a special transformation program that people come to you for
- Give it a name

Marketing 101

- A name for your program helps you stand out and helps people remember you
- Your name doesn't need to be super complicated but should represent your offer

Marketing 101

- Some favorite names from past students:
- Monarch Fit
- Conquer Community
- Gateway Health and Fitness
- Team No Excuses
- The Sweat Fam
- Transforme

Marketing 101

- We covered alot in this lesson, later in this module we are going to help you build your very own offer now that you understand the basics of what it entails
