

Discovery Call Script

The 10 minute discovery call comes after the Dm Outreach Script and right before the Sales Call Script

The purpose of the Discovery Call is to build rapport with your prospect, offer free advice, and qualify them into your program.

Ultimately you want to decide whether or not your prospect will be a good fit for you to work with, and if they would like to learn more about your program.

The last thing you want is to spend an hour explaining your program and find out the person is uninterested, or that your program can't help them achieve their goals.

The discovery call will be the gatekeeper to determine whether or not the prospect is invited to a sales call and will determine whether your prospect is interested in learning more. Remember the discovery call is not a sales call, you don't need to explain your program or offer here just yet. You only want to discover whether or not they are qualified for a sales call and to offer free advice.

Often times, when you use the Dm Outreach script or read through a coaching application, you'll be able to determine whether or not your prospect is qualified before a discovery call. You'll find that in most cases people who you talk to on a discovery call will be qualified for a sales call.

Though it is still important to have a discovery call first to weed out those who are serious. Just because you can help someone reach their goals does not make them qualified. You want to make sure they are serious about investing into a coaching program and are looking for help. And with outbound messaging it builds value in the sales call.

The discovery call will entail a lot of questions for the prospect. You are essentially giving an interview. You will be asking all of the questions, and letting your prospect do most of the talking. Remember, this is not the time to go into detail about your coaching offer, this is the time for you to get to know your ideal client better. At the end of the discovery call you will offer free advice that will help your prospect take a step closer to their goals, and then offer your program as the solution to help them get there faster.

Start by making small talk:

You: "Hey XYZ, how are you doing?"

User: "I'm doing well, thank you for asking. How are you?"

Here you can ask questions to break the ice.

You: “I’m doing great. Where are you calling in from?”

User: “I’m calling in from Salt Lake City”

You: “Awesome! I love Salt Lake. I’ve worked with tons of clients based out of there”

Next you want to thank them for hopping on the call and show that you respect their time.

You: “I appreciate you taking the time to hop on this call. I’m excited to learn more about you and how I can help you reach your goals”

Now, take control by prefacing the call and letting your prospect know the intention of the call.

You: “What I want to do on this call is ask you a few questions to see exactly where you’re at in your journey, see what kind of challenges you’re facing, and offer any support I can to help you get where you want to be faster. Sound good?”

Now you begin moving into the intelligence gathering phase.

Just like with the Dm Outreach Script, you want to discover what their desired situation is, what their current situation is, what's motivating them, and if they are committed to taking action.

What these questions will do is help you determine whether or not you can help them, if they will be a good fit for your program, if you align with their personality, and if they're ready for a sales call.

Based on their answers to these questions you can choose to invite them to a sales call, or end the conversation there. We will go over how to do both later in this script.

To get started with the intelligence gathering phase, ask them about their goals.

You: “So ____ what are your goals? What are you looking to achieve in the next 90 days?”

After they respond, acknowledge their goals and lead them into the next question.

The next question would be asking them what their challenges are. Again you are asking these questions to build rapport with your prospect and to determine whether or not you can help them overcome their challenges and achieve their goals.

You: “Losing 15 pounds is a great goal! Let me ask you this, what do you feel is your biggest challenge when it comes to this goal? What's standing in your way?”

Now you've discovered what their goals are and their challenges. You should now be able to determine whether or not they would be a good fit for your offer.

Next ask them about their motivation as to why they want to achieve these goals. We want a strong why. The stronger their purpose is behind their goals the more likely they will be to want to take action.

You: “I understand that challenge. Learning how to eat healthier with a busy schedule can be tricky. If you don't mind me asking, what's motivating you to reach these goals and overcome these challenges? Why is it important for you to succeed?”

Now you've learned your prospect's goals, what their challenges are, and understand what's motivating them.

If they are a good fit for your program, meaning you can help them achieve their goal, overcome their challenge, and give them free advice by breaking down your pillars and method and then ask if they would be interested in learning more about how you can help them reach their goals faster.

If you can't help them achieve their goal or overcome their challenge then politely end the call by giving them free quick advice and sending them on their way (trust me you do not want to waste your time or theirs getting them to invest in something that won't help them). Though, like I mentioned before, if you did your diligence in the Dm Outreach Script and Coaching Application you should have already weeded out those who aren't a good fit.

The final question you will ask your prospect is whether or not they would like help. Remember, you only want to get on a sales call and make a presentation to prospects that want to be on the sales call.

Ask them:

You: “Awesome! So based on what I've learned you are looking to achieve X goal, your challenges to achieve X goal is ABC, and you would like to achieve this goal because of 123. What I would do if I were you is take XYZ step. After that do 123. You can learn more about how to do that here _____. It can be a little confusing at first but I promise that's the fastest way to your goal given your situation. As a matter of fact, I've helped a handful of people just like you achieve these same results. I'd love to show you our framework of exactly how we do that with my clients. Would you be interested in a quick zoom call so I can show you exactly how you can reach these goals with my process?”

If they ask about price or investment say this:

You: “There is an investment to join the program, but we’ll save those details for our call tomorrow when we can go over how your program will look. But let’s say for now, if the price was right and there was no other concerns about the program would you be willing to take action?”

If they say yes, then book them for a Sales Call on the spot. You want to book the call as soon as possible the next day. You dont want to wait too long for you to book the call in case they lose momentum in the sales process. Keep the ball rolling by booking them 24 hours out.

If it turns out they are not committed to taking action or that now isnt a good time for them then politely schedule a day you can follow up with them at a better time. (better to learn theyre not ready after a 10 minute call than an hour long sales presentation.)

After they are booked for a sales call proceed to the next script.
