

SALES CALL

SALES CALL

- Welcome to the moment we've all been waiting for: The Sales Call
- The sales call is the moment your potential client becomes your actual client
- Through your sales call there will be a transaction of value where you exchange your services for income

SALES CALL

- This lesson will break down and demonstrate the framework in which you will conduct your sales calls
- We will also provide scripts and call breakdowns as tools for you to use for practice
- First lets dive into sales psychology

SALES PSYCHOLOGY

SALES CALL

- On the discovery call we learned that your prospect has a desired situation and a current situation
- Right now they have openly admitted that they are not where they want to be, and are looking for a solution to help them get where they want to be

SALES CALL

- You know that you can help your prospect go from where they are now, to where they want to be
- The sales call is to show your prospect exactly how you can help them go from point A to point B with your offer

SALES CALL

- Your offer is a vehicle they can use to get from point A to B
- But in this industry, there are many different vehicles that can be used
- The sales call will show your prospect why your offer is the best vehicle for them to get there the fastest and surest way possible

SALES CALL

- Now we already know that your prospect wants to get to their desired situation, and we already know your offer is the best way to get them there, once you demonstrate how your offer will help, the sales call will also provide an opportunity to work through any objections or hesitations that may come up

SALES CALL

- A big mistake trainers make is letting potential clients off the phone when they say “I need to think about it”
- The sales call is for you to help your clients think it through by providing information about the offer that helps your prospect overcome their hesitations

SALES CALL

- The sales call is also your opportunity to build value in your offer
- When someone sees your price without seeing the value, they will make their buying decision based on the number
- But when shown the value then they justify the price with belief in your offer

SALES CALL

- An important note to remember, your potential client who shows up to your sales call has chosen to be here and is currently looking for a solution to help them reach their goals, you are now allowed to sell
- You might have to push your prospects outside of their comfort zone and hold them accountable

SALES CALL

- What's best for your potential client is outside of their comfort zone. Otherwise they would never change or reach their goal
- Once you accept that you are going to have to make your potential clients uncomfortable by holding them accountable to their goals, you will be able to inspire change

THE ROADMAP

SALES CALL

- The Roadmap is the sales call framework we use to check all the boxes required of the sales call:
- Showcase the vehicle
- Build value in the offer
- Work through hesitations
- It is also done in a way thats interactive for your clients to SEE the value

THE ROADMAP

- Pre-Block Objections
- Current/Desired Situation
- Offer Breakdown
- Deliverables/Investment
- Handling Objections

PRE-BLOCK

CURRENT/DESIRED SITUATION

DELIVERABLES/INVESTMENT

HANDLING OBJECTIONS

SALES CALL

- To start the sales call, make sure you are calling over Zoom or a video call from your computer
- It is very important for you and your potential client to chat while seeing each other
- Make sure you have a good connection in a well-lit room
- Be organized, put together, and clean

SALES CALL

- Start the sales call early with a pre-call confirmation text the morning of and 30 minutes before the call to confirm (refer to Discovery Call lesson for script)
- Once you and your potential client are in the online meeting, create small talk for 60-90 seconds to break the ice

SALES CALL

- You've already talked to this potential client on the discovery call so you should be more familiar with them by this point
- Set the intention of the call early after the small talk to dive into the sales call
- With the sales call there won't be as long of an interview process

SALES CALL

- The intention of the sales call from the potential client's perspective is to:
- 1) Go over your program in more detail to show how you can help
- 2) Make sure its a good fit
- 3) Answer any questions or concerns about getting started
- 4) Take action

SALES CALL

- To set the intention you'll say: "Thank you so much for hopping on this call. What I want to do today is what you through (Your Program) to break down how it works. We'll go over all the details and show you how we can get you to your goals. If everything's a good fit and you like what you see, I'd love go over what it would look like for us to work together. Sound good?"

SALES CALL

- They will confirm and wait for you to take the lead
- After you set the intention for the call, you want to take a few minutes to work through any sort of objection your potential client might have before diving into the material.
- This will allow you to handle any major concerns before the close, or prepare you for an objection you may get at the end of the call

SALES CALL

- Here you will ask: “Before we dive into (Your Program), what questions or concerns do you have about getting started?”
- If they have any questions, respond with what you need to overcome that question or concern
- Then ask: “Is there be anything that would stop you from taking action today?”

SALES CALL

- If they have any questions, respond with what you need to overcome that question or concern
- Finally ask: “If everything checks out and it’s a good fit for you, would you be opposed to working together to help you reach your goals?”
- We will go over specific objections your potential client may have and how to handle them in the objection handling lesson

SALES CALL

- These questions allow you to overcome any objection your prospect may have before the price reveal, and will also set the intention of you making an offer for them to join your program
- Once you've sorted through any objections that may have before the price reveal its time to dive in

SALES CALL

- I recommend opening up a google doc that you can screen share with your potential prospect so they can visually have ques of progress throughout the sales call
- Open up the google doc and begin by recapping their desired situation
- Write down as many key points as possible

SALES CALL

- You'll say: "So yesterday on our call we talked about your goals and where you'd like to be in the next 90 days. Let's write them down here. What were your most important fitness goals you'd like to achieve?"
- Write down as many points as possible to have a clear picture of their desired situation

SALES CALL

- As you are writing down these goals, ask them why they're important goals for your potential client.
- You want to collect any reasons you can use as leverage at the end of the call to hold your client accountable

SALES CALL

- For example if they say: “I want to lose 15 pounds”
- Ask them why they want to lose 15 pounds
- When they say: “Becuase I’m tired of feeling unconfident when I go out”
- You can use that as leverage at the end of the call and say: “Earlier you told me that it was important for you to lose weight so you can...”

SALES CALL

- “be more confident when you go out, is that no longer important?”
- Once you have a clear picture of their desired situation move onto their current situation
- You want to create an uncomfortable gap between where they want to be and where they are now

SALES CALL

- Follow the same process of writing down as many key points about their current situation and what it is they'd like to change
- When you dig in, ask them why it's important for them to change their current situation
- Again you will use this to hold them accountable

SALES CALL

- If they say: “I’m confused and lost in the gym. I don’t really know where to start”
- You’ll say: “Why is it important for you to have clarity in the gym?”
- They’ll say: “So I can confidently change the way I feel and build confidence working out”

SALES CALL

- At the end of the call you can say: “Earlier you told me you were tired of feeling lost and confused in the gym. Is gaining clarity no longer priority number 1?”
- Once you have about 3-5 key points for both desired and current situation, you can move on with an important transitory question.

SALES CALL

- Before you move onto the next section of the sales call ask this question:
- “Why is it important that you make a change right now. Why not just stay in the same situation?”
- Their answer to this question will be the reason they need to take action now, and will be the reason you hold them accountable to

SALES CALL

- They'll say: "It's important for me to take action now because I'm getting older. I don't want to spend my life wishing to feel better."
- As you do this exercise with your potential client, validate their goals and make them feel good
- "That's a great goal!" "I love that goal!" and "I totally understand why you'd want to change that"

SALES CALL

- This process should only take 10-15 minutes. If it takes longer than 10-15 minutes you are spending too much time asking questions
- Now its time to transition to the pitch
- You'll say: "Awesome, I'm very excited about helping you reach these goals. What I'd like to do now is break down (Your Program) to show you exactly how it works. Sound good?"

SALES CALL

- They'll say yes and you'll take control by starting off with an overview of who your program is for, what results you help your clients achieve, the challenges you help your clients overcome, and your method
- This is your I help statement

SALES CALL

- You'll say: "Perfect! So what I do is help (Your Ideal Client) overcome (Challenges) and achieve (Transformation) with (Your Method)."
- The key here is to adjust this I help statement to match your ideal client perfectly by inserting the same goals and challenges they expressed earlier

SALES CALL

- Again with every statement you want to re-engage your potential client with a question.
- “Sound good?”
- This way they can keep pace with you throughout the call
- After you express your “I help” statement, you will go into breaking down your pillars and method

SALES CALL

- Underneath the Current/Desired Situation exercise on the google doc, list out the pillar for your business: nutrition, training, coaching, education, and community (your pillars may differ depending on your offer)
- One by one you want to break down each pillar and explain to them what your method is for each

SALES CALL

- In this process you will explain exactly what you will do for them for each pillar (dont worry about the deliverables just yet, you just want to break down the method)
- For the sake of this example we'll use: nutrition - macros, training - progressive overload, coaching - 1-1 coaching, education - resources, community - group of like minded individuals

SALES CALL

- You'll say: "We've broken our process down to 5 key pillars. Nutrition, Training, Coaching, Education, and Community. What I'm going to do now is explain how we will use these pillars to help you reach your goal."
- When you break down your pillars, go into what you will do for your client for each and why it's important

SALES CALL

- Example: “For nutrition we are going to focus on macros. We do this by calculating your custom macros to reach your goals. This way we ensure that youre eating the correct amounts. From here we will teach you how to track your macros so that you can maintain this lifestyle long term. We will also adjust them weekly to stay on track for your goals”

SALES CALL

- Do this with every component of your pillar
- If you offer meal plans present them here with an explanation of how it will help your clients reach their goal
- Same for intuitive eating guides or any sort of approach you will take with your offer

SALES CALL

- Continued: “For training what we will focus on is progressive overload. We will teach you how to track your workouts and program a custom workout plan. This approach will help you get stronger week to week and guarantee body changes.

SALES CALL

- Continue this with each component of each pillar
- List as many parts of the offer you can here that will be viewed as valuable to your potential client
- Continued: “For coaching we will have weekly check ins to track and measure progress. We will keep you accountable to your results with these check ins and be there when you need support...”

SALES CALL

- “This way you will always have someone in your corner to keep you motivated”
- “For education, we will have weekly group coaching calls to go over certain topics of fitness to help you better understand the process of transformation. There will be video lessons, and guides for you to use as resources...”

SALES CALL

- “This way you can use these tools as reliable resources you can keep coming back to whenever you get stuck”
- “Lastly we have community. This is where you’ll join other like-minded people who are going through a similar transformation. Having a community to back you up and spend time with will inspire you to make a lasting change”

SALES CALL

- Again for each pillar, list as many unique features you have to your offer that will help your potential client
- The key here is to also explain the benefit to each feature
- Why is it important for you potential client to receive the feature you are displaying, how will it benefit them?

SALES CALL

- Your potential client will not care about the feature of the offer unless they fully understand how it will help them reach their goals
- This will also position your offer as the best vehicle to get them from point A to point B
- Before moving on to the next section of the sales call, do a temp check

SALES CALL

- A temp check will allow your prospect to express any concerns or hesitations they have about your offer
- You do not want to let their concerns manifest into an objection later in the call
- Plus this serves as a good break for your prospect to re-engage and catch up

SALES CALL

- You want to make sure before you proceed that they 100% believe that your offer will help them achieve their goals
- If they are not 100% certain in the process they will not invest no matter the price (even $25 is a risk if they do not believe they will see results)

SALES CALL

- Questions to ask for a temp check:
- “What questions do you have about our process?”
- “How do you feel about what I’ve shown you so far?”
- “Do you believe that this will help you?”
- “What do you think is missing that you need?”

SALES CALL

- These questions will allow you to add or subtract anything from the offer that your potential client needs in order to make it a perfect fit
- If your prospect has concerns about the training program, you can customize it here (for example if they are concerned about gym vs home workouts, you can assure them that they have the option for both)

SALES CALL

- After explaining your pillars and method it's time to break down the deliverables
- The deliverables are where you will go through the actual structure of your program as it will be received by the client
- How will their training, nutrition, coaching, education, and community be received?

SALES CALL

- This will differ dependent on your program delivery but refer back to your marketing message homework
- As an example:
- “Training will be delivered through a custom 12 week workout split through trainerize. Adjustments will be made as you progress”

SALES CALL

- “Nutrition will be delivered through a custom meal plan or custom macros (or nutrition guide etc.) and will be updated on a weekly basis based on your progress.”
- “For coaching you will receive weekly check-ins through a form. You will have access to my personal phone number for any questions or...”

SALES CALL

- “support needed. I will also be checking in with you bi-weekly via text to offer support. You will also have access to weekly 1-1 calls as needed”
- “For education you will have access to our guides, resources, and video courses that we will use as a reference as you progress through your journey”

SALES CALL

- “And lastly for community you will be joining our facebook group and group chat. This is where you will be able to network and connect with people who will support you on your goals alongside me as your coach.”

SALES CALL

- After explaining the deliverables of the program, do another temp check
- “How does this all sound to you?”
- “What questions do you have about how the program is delivered?”
- “Is there anything you feel the program is missing?”

SALES CALL

- Once youve squashed any questions they might have about the program its time for the price reveal
- When it comes time to reveal the price, quickly recap everything your client is going to get to build value

SALES CALL

- Reveal the price by offering the program at its full value and follow up by asking a question
- Asking a question will force your potential client to respond breaking the awkward silence
- Questions here can be:
 - “I’d love to hear your thoughts”
 - “How do you want to move forward?”
 - “How does that all sound?”

SALES CALL

- So if the investment is $997 say: “With (Your Program) you’ll get (recap of your deliverables). The total value of the program is $997. I’d love to hear your thoughts and where you want to go from here”
- This gets your potential client to respond with either a yes or an objection.

SALES CALL

- Common objections you will get here is “Can I think about it?”, “I need to check my finances”, “I need to speak to my partner”, “Now is not the right time”
- Remember that part of the intention of the sales call is to help your potential client work through any concerns or hesitations. This is your opportunity to do so

SALES CALL

- The point after the price reveal is known as the back half of the sale, where there should be an equal amount of time spent working through your prospects objections than there had been presenting your offer
- Only few clients will close on the spot with no objections

SALES CALL

- The best way to handle objections is to be fully prepared for them to come
- You cannot be surprised by an objection if you are expecting them to come
- We will go over how to handle these objections in detail in the Objection Handling lesson
- For now let's assume that they take the offer and close

SALES CALL

- After working through your clients objections and getting the close its time to collect payment.
- You must collect payment over the phone. Do not let your prospect off the call without clearing payment first
- Far too often people will ghost payments once theyre off the call

SALES CALL

- Again, collect payment over the phone
- To do this gather their Credit Card information to store in your payment processor, or send them an invoice they can fulfill on the call
- Do not send them the invoice after the call, send it to them on the call and wait for them to fulfill it.

SALES CALL

- Payment processors you can use are Stripe, Square, or Waves
- I don't recommend using Paypal as Paypal makes it easy for clients to falsely charge back without consent
- With Stripe, Square, or Waves you can also create automatic billing/invoices

SALES CALL

- Once the payment has cleared you can begin the client onboarding process which will be presented in the delivery module of the course.
- This completes the walk through of the sales call for your coaching program
- Lets recap The Roadmap one more time

TROUBLE SHOOTING

SALES CALL

- The sales call is going to take practice, most of the places you get stuck at you will be able to progress at with more sales calls
- Remember that sales is a skill that can be developed over time. You will improve.
- The number 1 place trainers get stuck is with handling objections

SALES CALL

- To become better at handling common objections refer to the Objection Handling lesson, and practice your sales pitches.
- Make a routine to have a mock call with another student in the group, or rehearse your script in your free time.
